The octopus is made in two parts, the body and the tentacles. There are only two places that you have to cut and tie (I hate having to sew in ends). The body progresses from row to row using split rings. The tentacles are made almost entirely of split rings. The finished piece can be stiffened so that the tentacles are splayed out. The eyes are inserted when working the body.

Materials

No. 20 thread, 2 shuttles, 2 buttons (1/2" shirt size - 2 holes), 2 beads.

To finish the octopus I added a large bead to a piece of thread and pulled the thread through the RoCh of Row 6 of the body. I then added another bead tied a knot and made the thread into a loop for hanging.
